

Ashley Lucier, MEdL

Ashley Lucier is the state director of Amp Up Arts, a statewide collective impact initiative whose mission is to advance equitable experiences in arts education for all Alabama students.

A former English teacher, RtI Coordinator, and assistant principal, Ashley holds a Bachelor's in Secondary Education and Language Arts with a minor in Theatre, a Master's in Liberal Arts- English, and a Master's in Educational Leadership. Besides networking and frequently traveling around Alabama for work, Ashley also works closely with her leadership team to develop advocacy messaging, strategic planning, and backbone support resources for Amp Up Arts collaborative sites around the state. She is currently working to grow the capacity of Amp Up Arts through increased collaborative sites and growing partnerships to provide professional development, training, and opportunities to Alabama's arts specialist teachers and teaching artists, especially in underserved communities.

In addition, Ashley is closely involved in her local arts community, occasionally paints, and as a kidney donor, supports transplant advocacy. Ashley is currently living and working in the Montgomery area. She is happiest at home with her husband, two sons, dog, two cats, and chameleon, or on a hiking trail.
