

SAIL 2020

Nancy Brown

Nancy Brown has a Master's in Technology in Education from Lesley University in Cambridge Mass.

She is a former teacher who has taught subjects ranging from primary-level art to high school Spanish. Most of her teaching career was spent teaching Gifted Education at the elementary level in both public and private schools.

Her interest in Curriculum Development and Educational Technology has led her to leadership roles in training other teachers to become more proficient in using technology in their teaching. She was a part-time Instructional Technology Coach for Hoover City Schools. She spent several years as an Apple Educational Sales Consultant and Curriculum Solutions Specialist and has led workshops and seminars at technology and educational conferences across the South.

Nancy has been a Creative at the Birmingham Apple Store in Birmingham for the past thirteen years.

She is one of the original team members for the Imaginative Learning Workshop, which started twenty-four years ago and was the precursor for the present-day SAIL conference.
